The Congo is a conservation area surrounded by one of Colombia's most famous ecosystems: the coffee belt of the Sierra Nevada de Santa Marta. As such, the site is an Area of importance for the Conservation of Birds (AICA) in the Rio Frio Valley and is recognized worldwide for the natural and logistic conditions for the sighting of native and migratory fauna. There it is possible to appreciate some endemic and endangered species such as the Blue-billed Paujil (CraxAlberti) While in the Congo we get closer to the cultural discovery called Colombian archaeological heritage. After walking along a pleasant path with medium difficulty level you reach the old city. Upon arrival check in and then enjoy lunch, after which you will have time for rest.

Level of the activity: Moderately Strenuous, Hiking around 8-10 kilometers

At about 4 in the afternoon we will have a tour of the Ancient City guided by an expert who will tell us the story that frames this sacred place, the indigenous mythologies that left an ancestral mark on the city built in stone. You will have the opportunity to tour the terraces with their housing rings that were once inhabited by the Tayronas, the muddy roads the retaining walls and the road marking stones that served to indicate where the Mamo or town leader should walk.

If during the tour you step on some stone and it moves causing a slight sound, then you have stepped on a "false stone". Do not worry, these stones were strategically placed by the Tayronas in pre- Hispanic times to intentionally produce this sound. This technique works as a form of alarm bell or alert. All members of the community knew which were the stones that were located in a loose or false way and for this reason it was forbidden to step on them.

When an intruder or a person outside the community came walking through it and, unaware of the location of the false stones, this person stepped on them it caused a sound of shock between the stones that immediately alerted the presence of an intruder in the community. This alerted the indigenous warriors who with their cunning defended their people from attacks and looting of their precious gold art works.

At nightfall the guided tour ends with a bonfire, the ideal setting to learn with the silence of the mountain about the beliefs, ways of life, and popular knowledge characteristic of the Tayronas, their ancestral legacies and their worldview of Mother Earth. At the end of the talk you go to the dining room to eat and then rest.

Day 3. Old City- Santa Marta

After breakfast, we enter to the exuberant and pristine nature of the Sierra Nevada with a beautiful fall of crystalline water, here you will have free time to enjoy the natural environment and the refreshing waters that descend from the high mountain.

Before starting the ecological walk we recommended that you prepare a light bag where you can pack a bathing suit, insect repellent, sunscreen, camera and water. The estimated time from the reservation to the water fall is 2 hours. Because it is an area of environment conservation, you will hear the songs of all kinds of birds, many of which are typical of the region, as well as migrant birds, and on the large trees one can see and hear howler monkeys and herons.

Level of the activity: Moderately Strenuous, Hiking around 8-10 kilometers

The humid tropical forest predominates here, where there are trees up to 40 meters high. The greenery of its lush landscape and its refreshing waters surrounded by a natural environment, inhabited by endemic flora, confirm the Sierra Nevada, as one of Colombia's lungs for the world.
